CREATIVE PROJECTS

Ongoing

Journal Assessment Tool: 2009–Present
Created a database that allowed us to determine the number of places we had access to all our journals. This allowed us to see overlap and cancel subscriptions without losing access to any content. Additionally, assessment information such as impact factor and usage is included in the tool.

Collection Development Database: 2007–Present
Proposed and planned the development of a collection development database that will aid in various collection development activities including budget allocation and viewing collection development patterns

Book Assessment Tool: 2012–Present
Creating a database that is the corollary of the journal assessment tool for the library's eBook collection.

Past Projects

License Agreement Electronic Repository: 2006–2009
Used the D-Space system to store all license agreements, invoices and various communications with vendors which allowed for searching for individual license agreements and made it easier for the University Copyright Licensing and Interlibrary Loan Offices to find out about all of the library's licensed rights for electronic resources

Journal Overlap
Created a database that allowed us to determine the number of places we had access to all our journals. This allowed us to see overlap and cancel subscriptions without losing access to any content.

RSS Feed for New Electronic Resources
Created an RSS feed that automatically updates with the electronic resources that have been added to the library's A–Z page in the last 3 months

Cascade Mountain High School Library Project: 2005–2007
Set up the library on an open-source automated library system, trained staff on copy cataloging, and gathered donations of materials for the library's collection

Database Problem Notification
Created system to allow the library to notify patrons of database problems and allow them to easily report any problems they find
